MEDICINAL.

No Whiskey!

Brown's Iron Bitters is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not com-posed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a nonintoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881. Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

Brown's Iron BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

A Reminiscence of Byron. In Florence we resided at a large boarding establishment, kept by a Mme. du Planti, in a house which had formerly been Mme. de Stael's, in the Via Scala. There were some thirty boarders in this house, and here we remained two years, occupied with our studies. During a part of this time the poet Shelley, his wife and infant, were inmates of the same house; and we soon made their acquaintance. They were very kind to us, and Shelley proposed to mamma that if she would accompany them to Pisa, where Lord Byron was resident, he would himself under-take William's education, but mamma de-clined, saying she was fearful her husband would be displeased if she allowed an intimacy between her family and Lord Byron's. (Indeed, she was half afraid he would not approve of our friendship with Shelley and his wife.) During my leisure hours I was always in the Shelley's apartments. The poet would place his infant in my lap and bid me amuse myself with a live doll, while he continued his writing. Both Shelley and his wife were delightful, and when they left, some months afterward, we were very sorry. One day Shelley told me Lord Byron was coming next day to visit him. In vain I implored mamma to let me be with them when the mamma to let me be with them when the great poet came, but she would not hear of it. I told Shelley this with tears in my eyes, and he said: "Well little woman, if mamma won't let you be in the same room with the ogre, if you are very anxious to see him, look through the keyhole, and I will place him so that you shall have a full view of him." So, next day Willie and I went on tiptoe to Shelley's door and peeped through the keyhole. We were so fascinated, alternately watching the great poet, that we renately watching the great poet, that we remained there some time. At last Byron began to fidget, and said: "I say, Shelley, I don't know how it is, but I feel as if some was watching me." Shelley smiled, and pointing to the door told him what he was doing, and who we were, and also that mamma would not allow us to make his acquaintance. "I had no idea," said the poet, "I bore such a very bad name. I would be very glad to know the young people and their mother, too, if she would permit it." He then got up and came toward the door; but we fled down the passage, while he and Shelley stood laughing. This was the first and last I saw of Byron -- All the Year Round. How a Note of Henry Clay Was Paid. Mr. John Wentworth, in a lecture on Henry Clay in Chicago last week, told the following story: "Mr. Clay had a large and expensive family, and keenly felt his poverty, while he lost no opportunity of expressing his gratitude to friends, known and unknown, for all kinds of favors. The day upon which Mr. Webster made his celebrated speech in March, 1850, he was lightly eulogizing it at dinner, when some one asked him if he did not think Mr. Webster's influence had been greatly impaired by his allowing certain wealthy men in Massachusetts to settle an tice in the courts so as to devote more time to public affairs. Mr. Clay responded, "In that gives employment to our own people, view of the manner in which my note was view of the manner in which my note was paid at a bank in Kentucky. I do not think I ought to speak upon that subject. With difficulty had I raised the money to pay the interest when I went to the bank to ask a renewal. The cashier told me I had no note there. I asked him what had become of it, and he said he was instructed to answer no questions. And never have I been able to find out who paid it; but, turning to Judge Conrad, of New Orleans, he said, Judge I always supposed you had something to do with that matter. To which he responded: Whether I or any one else had anything to do with the matter, you will never know'. Mr. Clay then said: 'In view of my opponents I am as thankful for the secreey as the money, but when I am free from public life I am going to insist upon knowing who were such benefactors. When some one said: 'Mr. Clay your friends will never let you be free from public life.' In that view, gentlemen, said he, bear witness to my inexpressible gratitude to my friends. not only for their favor, but for their manner of bestowing it, adding that there was but one unpleasant thing about it-that it was the only present that he had ever received that he could not divide with his friends Here Judge Conrad observed: 'That need not trouble you, as you had liberally divided the proceeds before you gave the note. You are right, says Clay, the note was given principally to take up the paper of friends which I had endorsed."
